

Summer School

You would like to study abroad or go abroad for an internship, but an entire semester is too long or just no option for you? A Summer School could be the ideal alternative. Summer Schools are academic programmes during the semester break providing additional knowledge about study relevant topics. Usually, Summer Schools last for two up to four weeks and have subject-specific or general content - or a mixture of both. They conclude with an examination and in many cases, it is possible to take the earned credits into account for your study programme. For further information, please contact the examination board of your study programme. Summer Schools are subject to fees, whereby the amount of fees vary. Students of partner universities can often benefit from grants.

For further information about current Summer Schools, please check the website of the International Office.